NASHVILLE RECORDING ARTIST

Angie Broberg

BIOGRAPHY

At thirteen years old, she knew that country music was in her future. As soon as she was on stage, Angie Broberg realized that singing and performing were her passion. Now living in Nashville at the age of 22, Angie is continuing to pursue her career as a country music artist.

Upon entering her freshman year of high school in Tilden, Nebraska, Angie began looking for venues to perform outside of church and school where she often sang. She broadened her horizons with performances at local fairs, festivals and benefits throughout the Midwest headlining shows as well as opening for acts such as Mark Wills and Sara Evans.

Angie's debut album, Something Else, which is made up of ten songs written by many of today's top country songwriters, was released on April 20th, 2002. For this album, Angie chose songs that she believed held important messages. Butterfly Box, for example, is about following your dreams, which is something Angie feels strongly about. Another song that holds an important message is In the Eyes of Children, which reminds us of the examples that we set for children.

In balancing school at Belmont University's Curb College of Entertainment and Music Business with her career, Angie considers her second album to be her greatest accomplishment to date. She feels that with this album titled, Unchanged, she is taking the next step in developing her career. Angie is excited about this album, as she believes that it goes beyond her first, reflecting new and different music. With influences both inside and outside of country, including acoustic rock and R & B, Angie describes her sophomore album as "a true picture of my style."

Angie has been described by various people in the music industry as a professional who has an excellent mix of talent and charm. She has a refreshing burst of energy that allows her to interact well with her audiences.

Currently, Angie is embarking on a Radio Tour in order to promote her new album. Her 2004 summer tour kicked off in Mason City, Iowa, and includes a number of performances across the Midwest as well as Pennsylvania.

Girl power

Up-and-coming
Nashville singers

BY STEPHANIE SCHOMER
News Staff Reporter

Individually, they're some of Nashville's best up-and-coming talent. Together, they form a unique entertainment experience created just for their 12 performances beginning Sunday at the Fallsview Casino Resort and Hotel.

The performers, dubbed "6 Chix" for the 10-day stand in Niagara Falls, Ont., will perform together for a number of songs, but the majority of the show features individual performances by each of the singer-songwriters.

And while all the women are trying to make their way to country music stardom, the 6 Chix — Angie Broberg, Megan Connor, Lindsey Grant, Deanna Johnson, Mikelle and Leah Shafer — seem to be very different from each other.

"But we heart each other," said Connor.

Connor, who is acknowledged by the group as the fun, crazy one, moved to New York City after college to pursue acting. However, teaching spin class would be her ticket into the music industry.

"Oh Lord. They got dubbed 'spinnertainment,'" she said. "It was super passionate. People would line up an hour before to get into the class, because it's a combination of getting your butt whooped and being entertained. I taught so many people in New York, people with high status, and one thing just led to another."

Johnson didn't discover her love of singing until she was 22. But what brought about the change?

"A boy," Johnston said with a sigh. "I was a kid, he was my first crush, and it lasted through college. I finally got to date him, and he introduced me to the world of music. And then he cheated on me with a singer girl, so I started singing more, hoping that it would make him like me more.

"It's tragic, but it's the best thing that ever happened to me, because it got me here."

Despite how well the girls get along, there are no plans to form a permanent 6 Chix group.

"Our personalities aren't 'group,'" Connor said, "but if we could travel with this show that we're doing here, with this set-up, I think we all would."

In between rehearsing for 12 hours a day, Shafer also juggles the duties of motherhood, taking care of her 2-year-old daughter, Lolo.

"She's a singer already," Shafer said. "She sings 'Apple Bottom Jeans' and 'Jesus Loves Me.'"

After graduating from college, Grant made the move to Nashville to pour her heart into music.

"It's something I always wanted to do, but I was just scared to death, and really shy," she said.

The 6 Chix will be performing at the Niagara Fallsview Casino.

Discussing what they would do if music wasn't in their lives, it is an 18-year-old who uses just one name, Mikelle, who can't think of anything worthy.

Though the show is a country performance, the girls said fans of all types of music will be excited by the show, which features a variety of energies and songs.

"I think music in general — and I think it's a beautiful thing — is hard to define,"

Broberg said. "We all have that country element in the stories in the songs, but our voices are totally different."

She said they've worked endlessly to get where they are.

"People always say it takes a lot of luck to make it, but the luckiest people are those that work the hardest," she said.

August 5, 2003

Each year KAT 103 brings in talent from across the country, this year Sara Evans made an appearance with Steve Azar, Rodney Atkins, Mulberry Lane, and Angie Broberg. We try to arrange a wide variety of "established" musicians as well as "new" talent and "local" acts. Past Fun Country Festival's have included the likes of Lonestar, Rascal Flatts, Trace Adkins, Kathy Mattea, Restless Heart, Doug Stone and Sons of the Desert, just to name a few. We also like to promote the "up and coming" country stars such as; Kevin Denney, Shannon Lawson, Kortney Kayle, and Tammy Cochran.

Nothing compares to our "local" talent though. It's nice to have a group or individuals living in the Midwest to perform in front of the "hometown" fans. Angie Broberg was one of this year's local acts. I had a chance to talk to Angie before and after the show and had never heard her music before. I was impressed from the get-go. Angie and her band Prairie Fire took the stage with a combination of high-energy honky tonkers and driving ballads. She even threw in a few cover songs from Garth's "Squeeze me in" to an original "Butterfly Box", which was heard prior to the Fun Country Festival on the KAT airwaves.

It was amazing to find out that Tilden, Nebraska, could produce such a talent! Everyone seemed to be impressed including the other acts backstage that caught Angie's set. Look for big things out of this band in the future. I know that I will.
